That was a question asked by a great many persons yesterday when the steamers Kinau and Claudine got away for the Sainy City with big loads of liv-

> It was a great sight on the Kinau dock just before noon. The Kinau, all ready to back out into the stream at noon, was John Schneider; Prophet, Julius Ashe; crowded to the rails with all kinds and conditions of men, women and children bound for Hilo and the Fourth of July races. The steamer had a very noticeable list to starboard, for everybody tried to get on that side of the deck in order to watch the big crowd on the wharf and wave aloha to the friends and acquaintances who were being left behind to take care of Honolulu.

Leis played the usual indispensable part in the affair. Everybody were them. A malihini remarked, concerning the beautiful native flower custom: "The girls, most of them, look awfully sweet and cretty covered and adorned and even well on women-mutual sweetness and beauty, I suppose-but what surprises me the fact that the men are equally dorned with the glorious blossoms."

A friend explained matters to the malleverybody else leis on such an occasion, which was ladies conferring the lovely favors on the aur day of June, 1909, is now gentlemen and gentlemen presenting the ar not interest and will be ladies with the sweet-scented buds and blossoms in wreaths or leis.
